

The following indicates where employees and patrons could shelter during a tornado or severe weather. Each situation is different so it is important you know the basics of choosing a place to shelter and where your alternate shelter locations are at home or at work.

National Weather Service and FEMA recommendations are to NOT leave your normal wood frame or brick home to seek better shelter in a storm. Cluster and Elder housing all fall into this category. Most injuries occur from flying debris so being caught outside unprotected is life threatening. The vast majority of tornados are survivable in a regular house if sheltering in an appropriate area such as a basement or an interior bathroom. (FEMA March 2015)

11% of all tornados are considered "Significant" (EF2 or greater) but being exposed outside or near a window in even a "minor" tornado would be deadly.

Most government buildings are locked and unstaffed outside of normal Monday thru Friday business hours.
Program or building-specific storm shelter locations and instructions supersede this generalized list.
